Identify the Procuring Agency: Network cabinet design and ICT equipment quotations are typically requested by government institutions such as the Ministry of Finance, Samtse College of Education, or the Government Technology Agency (GovTech).

Determine which agency is issuing the Request for Quotation (RFQ) or tender. 2. Review the Standard Bidding Document (SBD): The SBD provides detailed instructions on bid preparation, including required documents, pricing format, and submission guidelines.

All quotations must be submitted in Ngultrum, inclusive of delivery charges, and accompanied by bid security if specified. 3. Technical Specifications: Ensure the quotation includes detailed specifications of the network cabinet, including dimensions, material, cooling provisions, and compatibility with existing ICT infrastructure. Some agencies may provide a technical specification sheet in the RFQ or tender document. 5.

Submission and Validity: Quotations are usually submitted in person at the designated office (e.g., conference hall of the institution) and fax or electronic submissions are not accepted. Quoted prices are generally valid for 12 months from the date of submission, and goods should be delivered within the timeframe specified in the RFQ. 6.

Evaluation and Award: The procuring agency evaluates quotations based on total cost, compliance with technical specifications, and completeness of documentation. The unit rate may be corrected if discrepancies are found, but the total quoted price governs.
