Key Takeaways

China Unicom offers a terminal device gift under the PEK TRAVELPASS program, with specific rental, deposit, and usage rules for inbound travelers. Overview of the Terminal Box GiftChina Unicom's PEK TRAVELPASS is a portable terminal device that integrates mobile Wi-Fi, SIM card communication, and QR code payment functions. It allows travelers to access the internet, make voice calls, and pay at venues supporting UnionPay, Cloud QuickPass, or WeChat payment codes.

Eligibility and Application

Where to Apply: Available at Beijing Capital International Airport (China Unicom service hall) and Beijing Daxing International Airport (Mobile Services section and China Unicom service hall),. Required Documents: A valid passport is necessary for registration and SIM card activation.

Pricing and Gift Rules

Device Price: The terminal device is priced at CNY 400. Trial Period: During the trial period, the device can be rented for free, but a deposit of CNY 400 is required. This deposit is refundable upon return of the device.

SI

M Card Packages: Communication SIM cards are available in 7, 10, 15, or 30-day durations, which can be inserted into the terminal device or used in a mobile phone.

Usage and Services

Communication: After inserting the SIM card, users can access mobile Wi-Fi, SMS, and voice calls.

The SIM

M card can also be used independently in a phone. Payment: The device supports QR code payments at venues displaying UnionPay or Cloud QuickPass logos, and some locations accept WeChat payments. Top-up Services: Users can recharge the SIM card for extended use beyond the initial package.

Key Notes

The terminal box gift is conditional on the deposit, which ensures the device is returned after the trial. The device is designed for short-term travelers, making it convenient for tourists needing both connectivity and mobile payment options. Travelers can also use the SIM card separately in their own devices if preferred.

In summary, the China Unicom terminal box gift under the PEK TRAVELPASS program provides a trial rental of a multifunctional device with a refundable deposit, bundled with short-term SIM card plans for communication and payment services, primarily aimed at inbound travelers at Beijing airports.
