Example of a detailed price list for a distribution box

Overview

This easily printable template has columns to enter the price list of items, their price quantity, and total cost.

Key Takeaways

A typical distribution box pricing list ranges from $25 to $250 per unit depending on material, amperage, IP rating, and customization options. I

P Rating: Higher ingress protection (IP65–IP69K) requires better seals and testing, raising the price. Amperage and Circuits: Higher amperage and more circuits increase internal components and engineering complexity. Customization: OEM branding, modular compartments, and special cutouts add to the cost.

Mounting Type: Flush-mounted boxes often cost more than surface-mounted due to installation complexity.

Additional Considerations

Safety Features: Residual current protection, surge protection, and proper earthing can affect pricing. Accessories: Blanking plates, cable entry systems, and removable sub-panels may be included or priced separately. Bulk Orders: Wholesale pricing typically reduces per-unit cost for large orders.

This example provides a clear structure for a distribution box price list, allowing electrical contractors, facility managers, or procurement specialists to compare models, plan budgets, and make informed purchasing decisions.
