Key Takeaways

Kuwait's first fiber optic cable factory is operated by Taihan Kuwait in the Mina Abdullah Industrial Area, producing high-quality optical cables locally. Overview of Taihan Kuwait FactoryKuwait's first fiber optic cable manufacturing facility was inaugurated by Taihan Kuwait Company in the Port of Abdullah Industrial area. The factory spans 5,000 square meters and has an initial production capacity of 500,000 kilometers of fiber annually, with an investment of $15–20 million.

This facility marks a significant step in Kuwait's transition from copper to optical fiber networks, supporting faster, more secure data transmission.

Strategic Importance

The factory aligns with Kuwait's “New Kuwait 2035” vision, aiming to enhance the country's digital infrastructure, attract foreign investment, and create local job opportunities. It also serves as a regional hub for optical cable production, extending supply to neighboring GCC countries such as Saudi Arabia and Qatar. By localizing production, Kuwait reduces reliance on imports and strengthens its telecom sector, particularly for 5G networks, IoT, and AI-driven infrastructure.

Joint Venture and Technology

Taihan Kuwait is a joint venture between Taihan Cable & Solution of South Korea and Rank General Trading & Contracting Company in Kuwait. The factory is equipped with advanced production lines and testing equipment identical to Taihan's flagship plant in Dangjin, South Korea, ensuring high-quality optical cables tailored to local and regional needs.

Additional Fiber Optic Infrastructure Providers

Other companies, such as Fiber Network Company, provide a wide range of fiber optic cables, accessories, and network solutions in Kuwait. They focus on telecom systems, networking infrastructure, and cost-effective solutions for clients, complementing the manufacturing capabilities of Taihan Kuwait.

KATE

C also supplies premium fiber optic cables and network components, supporting high-performance connectivity and automation projects across industries.

Conclusion

Kuwait now hosts a fully operational fiber optic cable factory, positioning the country as a growing hub for optical cable production in the Middle East. Taihan Kuwait's facility, combined with local distributors and network solution providers, ensures that the nation can meet rising demand for high-speed, secure digital communication infrastructure while supporting economic diversification and technological advancement.
