Key Takeaways

Plastic fiber optic patch cords typically range from $5 to $30 per unit, depending on length, connector type, fiber mode, and customization.

Pricing Overview

The cost of a plastic fiber optic patch cord varies widely based on several factors: Fiber Type and Mode: OM3 and OM4 multimode fibers are common for high-speed structured cabling, while OM5 is used for short-distance SWDM applications. Single-mode fibers (OS1/OS2) generally cost more due to higher precision requirements. Connector Type: LC, SC, FC, ST, MPO/MTP, and Uniboot LC connectors influence cost.

MPO/MTP connectors, especially for 12F/24F cores, require precise alignment and polishing, increasing the price. Length: Prices increase linearly with length, but the rate varies depending on the cable jacket and armoring. Jacket Material: LSZH (Low Smoke Zero Halogen) and plenum-rated cables are more expensive due to safety and fire-resistance standards.

Armored cables for harsh environments also carry higher costs.

Customization and OE

M Orders: Custom logos, colors, cable printing, and packaging can add $30–$100 per order, though bulk orders reduce unit cost. Testing and Certification: Patch cords with IL/RL test reports, 3D interferometer measurements, and end-face inspection results are priced higher due to quality assurance. Certifications like RoHS, UL, and CRP also affect cost.

Typical Price Ranges

Standard 1–3 meter LC-LC or SC-SC multimode patch cords: $5–$15 per unitSingle-mode OS2 patch cords: $10–$30 per unitCustomized or armored patch cords: $20–$50 per unit, depending on specifications and bulk discounts.

Buying Tips

Bulk Orders: Ordering in larger quantities significantly reduces the per-unit cost. Match Specifications to Needs: Avoid overpaying for high-end fibers or connectors if your network does not require them. Check Certifications: Ensure the patch cords meet required safety and performance standards for your environment.

By considering these factors, you can select plastic fiber optic patch cords that balance performance, durability, and cost effectively.
